this edition of the naranjado is presented to you with a philosophy which must be embraced by every person on the face of our minute globe — a philosophy which looks backward only for direction, not eclecticism; looks at the present as a kaleidoscope of problems in inter-relationship, not isolation; looks at the approaching tomorrow with a universal focus, not with microscopic independence . . . time permits of few errors in judgment; judgment is made by men . . . we are all exposed — let there be time to control that to which we are exposed, and let there be men whose minds are not bound with yesterday's dogmas, yesterday's solutions, yesterday's visions . . . this naranjado is dedicated to tomorrow's men—not only trained, but educated . . .
