SHORT SKETCH OF KNOXVILLE.

In presenting this, the First Number of the Quarterly Business Directory of the City of Knoxville, and General Trade Circular, the Publishers deem it proper to give a short history of its origin, &c.

In February, 1792, says C. S. Williams, in his Knoxville Directory, published in 1859: "The town was established and called Knoxville, in honor of Maj. Gen. Henry Knox, then Secretary of War. The only inhabitants of the place at that time, were John Chislom, Mr. McLemee, Hugh Dunlap and Samuel and Nathaniel Cowan. The first named kept a tavern. Mr. Dunlap and the Messrs. Cowans, sold merchandise. The whole town then was a thicket of brushwood and grape vines, except a small portion in front of the river, where all the business was done" at that time. "The survey of the ground and division of it into lots, was made by Col. Charles McClung, probably under the direction of General James White, who owned the land. There never was any public sale of lots. The original owner, (Gen. White,) sold any person one of them for eight dollars, who would settle on and improve it."

The first number of the Knoxville Gazette was issued at Rogersville, in the year 1792, by Mr. Roulstone. In a short time he removed to Knoxville, and continued the publication of his paper for a number of years. The whole sum received by Mr. Roulstone, for printing the Acts and Journals of 1792, and other public papers, was only six hundred dollars.

In the year 1793 Knoxville was threatened with destruction at the hands of the Indians, Creeks and Cherokees, about fifteen hundred strong, lead by John Watts, a half-breed and Chief of the Cherokee Nation. Double Head was in the Company, Watts was Commander in Chief, and although Double Head was a renowned warrior, he seemed, on this occasion, to have been subject to the orders of Watts. Owing to the fact that a Station—Cavet's—was taken by the Savages on the 25th of September, of the same year, a dispute arose between the Creeks and Cherokees as to the murder of some children whom they had captured. The murder was said to have been done by the Creeks. A dispute arose. Watts refused to proceed further. The party disbanded and Knoxville was saved. Knoxville, at that time, could only muster about forty fighting men; yet this brave little band, leaving two of their oldest number in the block house, on the spot now occupied by the Franklin House, marched out to meet the foe under the command of Col. James White, (afterwards General,) and proceeded to station themselves at an interval of twenty feet between each man. Orders were given by their heroic leader, to sell their lives at a fearful price, if an attack was made. Their Fathers, Mothers, Wives, Sisters, Children, and those they loved, not of kin, were there.

The citizens of Knoxville, on that occasion, manifested a degree of valor and courage which has been handed down to the present day. No more courageous men can be found in all this bright clime of ours than is to be found in Knoxville to-day, as well as when the City, in a vast wilderness, was composed of three or four houses.

In 1793 the first National troops were stationed in Knoxville, under the command of Capt. Carr, a Revolutionary officer. The name of his Lieutenant was Rickard. 'Tis said by an old citizen that the Convention of 1796 was held in a barracks, which they built immediately opposite the present Court House.

In the same year Col. Christy, commanding the United States troops at Knoxville, died, and was buried with martial and masonic honors, on what is now called College Hill. In digging the foundation for the main College building, two skeletons were exhumed, which were supposed to have been those of Indians interred there. An old citizen thinks they were the bones of Col. Christy and Mr. Ogden.

The first Territorial Assembly met in Knoxville on the 4th Monday of February, 1794. The members were thirteen in number, chosen from nine Counties, Knox sending two.

The second day all the members went to a place of worship, preceded by their Speaker and the Governor, where the Rev. Samuel Carrick, a Presbyterian minister, delivered a sermon from the 2d and 3d verses of the 1st chapter of the Epistle of St. Paul to Titus.

The Territorial Assembly, after continuing its labors for some time, at length adjourned, and met again in August following. At the August session, a charter was passed for a College, to be established in the vicinity of Knoxville, which was called "Blount" in honor of the then Governor.

In July, 1795, a road was opened from Knoxville to Nashville, so far as to allow the passage of a loaded wagon.

On the 11th of January, 1796, a Convention met here for the purpose of forming a State Constitution, and on the 6th of the following June, Tennessee was fully admitted into the Union. The delegates to that Convention unanimously resolved to receive nothing for their services on that oc-cession. Knoxville, by a provision of the State Constitution, was the seat of Government, until 1802. Subsequent Legislatures kept it at the same place until 1807, when they removed to Kingston, and in a few days returned back to Knoxville, where they continued to meet until 1817, when the seat of Government was removed to Murfreesboro, where, after a few sessions, it was removed to Nashville, and there still remains.

In the early history of our town and country, two noted blood thirsty wretches, known as the Harps, infested Knox County. They made a crop on Beaver Creek; stole various kinds of stock from their neighbors, which they sold to citizens of Knoxville. They soon seemed to have become instigated by the devil, to do all that was wicked and atrocious. The first man they killed was young Coffee, on Beaver Creek. Six or seven became the victims of these fiends, who afterwards perished at the hands of a wronged and outraged public, without the help of court or jury.

Soon after the above events transpired, the navigation of our beautiful Holston was spoken of, and in 1827, a company was formed for the purchase of a boat. A gentleman, Col. W. B. A. Ramsey, now a citizen of middle Tennessee, was sent to Cincinnati to make the purchase. The boat, THE KNOXVILLE, was brought here and placed in its appointed work. It was not however the first boat brought to Knoxville. THE ATLAS preceded THE KNOXVILLE, and astonished the natives on its arrival. The master, Capt. Connor, with his Pilot, Capt. Andrew T. Jones, (the father of our present estimable County Court Judge, C. W. Jones,) found himself at the time as great a hero as is Generals Grant or Lee, to-day.

Our town has always been famed for its good health and good morals; but, as in all cities, we have had our scourges. In 1837 and 1838 the place suffered greatly from severe bilious fevers, and caused many deaths. The origin of this fatal disease was supposed to be from the mill ponds, which, in the summer seasons had become comparatively dry. Large deposits of decomposing matter became exposed to the sun in 1836-7. The malaria again showed itself in 1838, by more sickness, of a like nature, and proved very fatal. The mill dams were consequently ordered to be torn down as a nuisance, since which time Knoxville has been remarkably healthy.

In 1855 the East Tennessee and Georgia Rail Road was completed to this place and tended greatly to destroy the river trade, which had hitherto been good.

Knoxville has now twelve Churches, Protestant, and one Roman Catholic. The large body of the first inhabitants, who cared for religion, it seems, were Presbyterians. The Methodist Church was established previous to the 2nd Presbyterian. Its members originally worshipped in a frame house, east of the town, now known as Methodist Hill. Now they have a magnificent edifice dedicated to the worship of God, in a central portion of our city. The Episcopal Church was organized in 1844, and the Baptist soon afterward.

Of Knoxville and its early history, much can be said, which we trust we will be able to lay before our readers at an early date. While Knoxville, together with hundreds of the cities of the South, was fast tending to a population which her fine location, her beautiful river, on which she is situated, and her fertile valleys and beautiful hills, on which nature's God seemed to have lavished his richest blessings, a population which we natives of the soil, and those who had cast their destinies with us, from other countries, from other climes, might justly be proud—just then came war.

“O war! begot in pride and luxury,
The child of malice and revengeful hate;
Thou impious good and good impiety!
Thou art the foul refiner of a State,
Unjust scourge of men's iniquity;
Sharp easer of corruptions desperate!
Is there no means but that a sin sick land
Must be let blood with such a boist'rous hand.”

Knoxville did not escape the wide desolation which swept over the entire South, and much of our now rebuilt town was destroyed from 1861 to 1865. During the memorable siege in November 1863, when the Confederate troops, under Gen. Longstreet, had the town almost surrounded for several days, Gen. Burnside, commander of the Federal forces, found it necessary to burn many buildings, consisting of elegant residences, machine shops, turning tables, and much that was valuable and beautiful to our town. North of the Rail Road was almost entirely consumed. But when the smoke of war cleared away, and the dove with the olive branch came, all was peace. Then it was that Knoxville began to assume the dignity of a city, and spring again into life as by magic. During the years that have since passed, more than hundreds of houses have been erected in the city and suburbs; some of which would do credit to any city this side of New York. Since the war, the Rail Road from this place, known as the Knoxville and Kentucky Rail Road, has been completed some thirty-six miles, to the richest and most inexhaustible coal fields in America, situated on Coal Creek, in Anderson County. Very soon, we hope, said road will be completed, thereby giving us direct connection with Louisville, Cincinnati, and all the cities of the North.

Our road South, the Knoxville and Charleston Rail Road, which will when completed, put Knoxville in direct communication with Charleston, South Carolina,—a seaboard town—is now being rapidly pushed forward, under a wise and energetic corps of men. The road is already completed to Maryville, the County site of Blount County, distance sixteen miles from Knoxville.

It would amply repay a visitor to examine our various Machine Shops and Manufactories. They are numerous and are first-class. To persons who seek new homes, whether he be merchant, mechanic, lawyer, doctor, or his profession what it may be, no town or city holds out greater inducements and rarer attractions than the City of Knoxville does at the present time.

The General Assembly of the State of Tennessee, at its fall session, 1868, passed a law making Knoxville proper and East Knoxville, one and the same. Heretofore Knoxville and East Knoxville, were separate and distinct bodies, the dividing line being first Creek. Knoxville proper, elected her municipal officers, and East Knoxville did the same; but on petition of many prominent citizens of East Knoxville, the corporation was made one, without any extension or alteration of corporation lines other than to abolish the line separating Knoxville proper from East Knoxville. The city proper and East Knoxville, have not as yet been re-warded, consequently, at our last municipal election the polls were opened as before the passage of the bill consolidating the two corporations. Hereafter the City Council will meet at the City Hall, on Market Square, a commodious building, erected during the past year, for the purpose of Recorder's Office, Fireman's Hall, Calaboose, Engine Room, Policeman's Head Quarters, &c.

During the year 1868 our City suffered severely from fire, a fine block of brick buildings on the corner of Gay and Main Streets, was entirely destroyed, which as yet are not rebuilt.

We have a Steam Fire Engine, of superior quality, under the management of an energetic company, for the protection of the property of our City. We have, also, a hand Engine, in complete working order, with a capacity for doing good work, and which has rendered valuable services in the past, and we have no doubt will be just as effective in the future.

We expect in our next number, to be able to give a view of the East Tennessee University, with its President and Faculty complete, together with many other matters of great interest to the business portion of our City.

---

We return our most heartfelt acknowledgments to our friends and neighbors, WILL. R. MCBATH, Circuit Court Clerk, and WM. RULE, County Court Clerk, and others, for their kindness and gentlemanly bearing in favor of our BUSINESS DIRECTORY for the City of Knoxville.

Long may they live and prosper for their kindness and liberality towards us.

The publication of our First Number has been necessarily delayed beyond our former expectations, from various causes; but we confidently expect to be able, eventually, to give entire satisfaction. If there should be any deficiencies in this Number, as we are fearful there may be, we will endeavor to supply them in our next Number.

Special attention is called to our enterprising and public spirited advertising friends, who have, by their noble and laudable liberality, manifested a more than commendable desire to build up and encourage our fast growing City on its march to greatness and importance, and place it, what it is shortly destined to be at no distant day, among the largest and most populous Cities of the proud and patriotic State of Tennessee.

The Publishers, relying upon the liberality and encouragement of the true Business Men and Mechanics of the City, (of the latter of whom the Senior Publisher professes to be one of long standing,) have commenced this Periodical with an issue of between 2,000 and 3,000 copies, which they expect, during the year, to increase from 5,000 to 10,000. This, being a Quarterly Periodical, (once every three months,) will constitute, decidedly, the best and most popular medium of Advertising ever introduced into the State of Tennessee.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

FOUNTAIN FIRE COMPANY No. 1.

Engine Room, North Corner City Hall, Market Square.

The City is furnished with a magnificent Steam Fire Engine, ("J. C. Luttrell,") manufactured by the Silsby Island Works, which is worked by a Volunteer Fire Company, composed of citizens. The Engine is of superior quality, well cared for, and well worked, when required. A practical Engineer is employed to care for the same, whose duty it is to be with the Engine at all times, and see that it is in perfect working order. The Company consists of about one hundred men: the Officers, as follows:

Will. R. McBath, Foreman; T. P. McNichols, First Assistant Foreman; W. H. McCampbell, Second Assistant Foreman; T. A. Burrier, First Engineer; Carrick Park, Second Engineer; Mat. Swan, Third Engineer; Sanford C. Smith, Secretary; F. W. Walker, Treasurer; Z. Taylor Barry, Foreman Hose; Jas. Householder, Assistant Foreman Hose; George Sedgewick, First Pipeman; Chas. Youngblood, Second Pipeman; C. B. Nance, Third Pipeman; H. Goodman, Fourth Pipeman; Robt. Brown, Door Keeper. Regular Meeting first Thursday Evening each Month. Drill, second Thursday Afternoon each Month.

KNOXVILLE FIRE COMPANY No. 2.

Engine Room, West Corner City Hall, Market Square.

The City is, also, furnished with an excellent Hand Fire Engine, in charge of a Colored Company, which is well manned, and will doubtless render valuable service should occasion require. The Officers are as follows:

Pleas. J. Jackson, Captain; Wm. Nelson, Assistant; Thos. Miner, Secretary; Hark Williams, Assistant Secretary; John Johnson, Treasurer; Wm. Thomas, Engineer. Regular Meeting and Drill, Monday Evening of each week.

THERE is, also, another Hand Fire Engine, which has recently been transferred to East Knoxville, but, as yet, a Company has not been organized to take charge of it.
