ALTHOUGH the Class of January, 1932, is the smallest in the school, this group of students has contributed much to the school's activities. A few failed to reach the goal before the gates were closed, but a loyal class remains.

Paul McClure, Lloyd Moore, and Roscoe Shaw were stars on the football team; Walter Priebe and Edmund Jauch, on the basketball team, and Paul McClure was a star on the swimming team. William Seibel earned a manager's sweater in football. Next year's football captain, Roscoe Shaw, is from our midst. He was also president of the Scholarship Society last semester.

Roy Holman and Amy Callow gained recognition on the Honor Roll. The editor, Roscoe Shaw, and two other staff members—Annie Cormack and Lillian Wall—of "The Red and White," a new literary magazine appearing on the campus this spring, were also students in this class.

In all, the class has done much to uphold the standards of the school, and to create a widespread feeling of good fellowship.

THE JUNE Class of 1932 has now completed its training for Seniorhood with high honors won by innumerable achievements.

These "gateopeners," revealing their varied talents, have undertaken music, art, science, athletics, and dramatics enthusiastically and well.

Greatly contributing to the dramatic spirit of the school, on February 6 they presented "Love in a Mist," a lively comedy, which delighted a large Lodi audience. The characters were successfully portrayed by Marcia Zelver, Alice Field, Fink Beckman, Robert Mondavi, Ella Strother and Charles Faber.

On May 8, a cast of six composed of Doris Miner, Norman Adams, Robert Mondave, Ernest Jacobsen, Claire Hopkins, Bruce Rowel, entertained the students with "The Rookie and the Rules," a short comedy. The proceeds from both of these entertainments helped to swell the fund for the Junior-Senior Banquet.

As the theme for the banquet the class chose "Hawaii," carrying out the idea in the decorations and in the toasts which centered upon the suggestion, "We Go Travelling." Those responding to toasts were Charles Faber, junior president; Margaret Taylor, president of the student body; Lloyd Engel, senior president; and Mr. V. A. Rohrer, principal. An orchestra, under the direction of Marie Veit, and a ukelele band, led by Paul Thommen, played Hawaiian music. A quartet of junior boys also added to the enjoyment of the evening.

The class has been well represented in the band and orchestra, the Scholarship Society, and Chemistry Club, and also on the staffs of "The Tokay," "The Flame," and "The Red and White."

In agriculture, several members won outstanding positions on the state judging teams during the school year. Those taking part were Irvine Mettler, Charles Faber, Ralph Hawley, Giuseppe Nepote, Earl Hoff, Alexander Pirie, Ralph Weaver, Frank Pierce, Edna McKindley, and Ella Strother.

The juniors have, in addition, won many block and circle letters awarded this year in both agriculture and athletics.

Having successfully passed through the third gate of high school learning, with the help of their faithful sponsors, Miss Ida Rinn and Mr. P. H. D. Winsor, the Class of '32 is eagerly waiting to gain entrance to the fourth.

THE CLASS of '33 entered the gates of the Lodi Union High School in large numbers. Some of our members, however, finding the going too hard, have fallen by the wayside but those of us who have stayed on have found our experiences and associations pleasant ones. In short, we like this life.

Our class is well represented in all the athletics. Douglas Engel was probably the outstanding athlete, winning a block "L" in both football and basketball. Schmiedt, Runnels, Epronson, and Anderson won a circle "L" in football. Some others in our class have attained fame in track, swimming, and tennis.

Kathryn Graham, Anthony Gariota, Esther Nies, Erna Stabbert and Margaret Moore are sophomores who are members of the Scholarship Society. Many of our class have their names on the honor roll.

Francis Pierce, Yoshio Iwamura, John Matsuhira, Hubert Mettler, Theodore Leventini, Camilo Leventini, Leslie Fry, Clyde Myers and Clifford Schmiedt brought recognition to the Class of '33 by placing high in the judging contest held in San Luis Obispo.

From all this, one can see that our own sophomore class is really a remarkable one. We are, however, hoping for bigger and better things. We look forward to our junior and seniors years with great expectations.

THE GATES of high school were opened this year for many freshmen to pass through in order that they might gain a higher education. Perhaps, for some this is the last step that will be taken while the remaining few will go on to college. On account of the large number of students, the class was divided into six sections each section acting as a separate organization.

Several students have already made the football, basketball, track, and swimming teams. These can be looked upon as future stars. In the next few years many more will probably come forward to demonstrate their ability in various fields. Not only in athletics have the students shown their ability, but also in entertainments such as the Christmas operetta.

The mid-term freshmen girls showed marked talent in their presentation of the play "They Were Deceivers Ever." The play was given as their part of the entertainment of the Girls' Association. Several students have shown ability in writing one-act skits as was shown in the dramatization of a freshman masterpiece written by Bob Moore and Walter Howen. The freshmen are well represented in the chorus and several have shown outstanding ability in their work. There were ten freshmen in the band and orchestra while many more are studying music but were not successful enough to get in, the first year. Ten freshmen played on the class "B" football team, seven on the class "B" basketball team, three on the class "B" track team and five on the class "B" swimming team. Many freshmen girls have taken an active part in basketball, baseball, and swimming.

Eighty girls were on tennis, baseball, volley ball, hockey, swimming, basketball teams. Twenty-one freshmen girls were on the hockey team. The girls took second place in baseball, tennis doubles, and volley ball.

The freshmen now feel that they are well equipped to carry on their duties in their sophomore year and hope to accomplish more and bigger tasks in the future.
