Principal's Message

YOU, GRADUATING CLASS, and I have not had much chance to get acquainted during the one semester we have worked together, but I hope that our association has been as pleasant for you as for me. You are leaving Stockton High School after four years of contact with its traditions and life. What have they meant to you and what meaning will they have in the years to come? Most of you have accepted the responsibilities of high school life with a full sense of their meaning, with the result that your stay in school has been profitable to you and to us. If you carry the same spirit into your activities after school, you will get the same joy out of them as you have from your school. You have learned a good deal about many subjects, but the thing that you will carry away and keep for all time probably is the attitude you have had toward your work. Let there be a joy in what you do, a desire to serve, and you will be counted successful.

W. Fred Ellis

JANUARY 1926

The Silver Boat

At night I see a silver boat—
In a sea of ink, 'tis set afloat.
The prow is of silver,
The lining of pearls;
And it's colored with dreams
Of boys and girls.

Fancies

A fancy is the oddest thing—
Goblin, ghost, and fairy ring,
Pirate, gnome and fairy tale,
A shuddering thought of a
phantom's wail,—
These and others do I see
That my fancy paints for me.

Game of '26 Midsters Told in Four Quarters

Great team crashes to victory with score of 65 members to 0!

The Blue and Gold Aggregation of S. H. S. won fame and recognition in a smashing mid-term victory on January 28, 1926. The game was fought against towering obstacles, but the "never-say-die" spirit brought the colors flying through the fray. Much praise and credit belong to Coaches Post, Osborn, Ward, and McGlothlin.

1922-1923

A big crowd turned out for first practice on the S. H. S. gridiron. Consternation reigned among faculty coaches and varsity players when the green mob overflowed the field. Much ignorance and awkwardness were displayed in the first workouts, but the mass was finally reduced to some order. Three men showed the makings of great players in this first round: Wallace Moore, Clarence Bush and Mitchell Oliver. Jack Reid starred in dramatic workshop.

1923-1924

"Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here!"

The cheerful fellow informed everybody that '26 was on hand for grid practice of the second quarter. After a general scrimmage one William Mahaffey emerged before the public eye. Paula Weinstein and Hubert Miller scored in debating and art, respectively, and Clarence Bush rose in basketball as well as football.

1924-1925

Full-fledged substitutes were the members of the Blue and Gold team, "rarin' to go" at the beginning of the third season. Ted Clark, Sue Drouin, Paula Weinstein, Bernyce Ingersoll, Mitchell Oliver landed on the "student controls"; Janice Dixon, Edward Cottle, Mitchell Oliver, Nika O'Connell, and William Striplin covered ground in journalism. At the end of this season the "dope" was all in favor of '26.

1925-1926

"Come on, Gang!"

The war cry sounded when sixty-five members of the Blue and Gold team entered upon their last quarter. After a rousing rally, Clarence Bush was chosen captain, but when he decided that he was trying to play too many positions, Hubert Miller was prevailed upon to call signals. Paula Weinstein was assistant-captain; Janice Dixon, record-keeper; Ted Clark, fee-taker. As yell leaders, Ted Clark and Jack Reid roused big enthusiasm in the student body.

The team set as its goal the inauguration of complete mid-term activities, and began its smashing drive for victory. Effective tackles brought from the Executive Committee consent to back the mid-term annual. Ground was gained with other activities, but the big score was made with a beautifully executed play, "It Pays to Advertise." Twenty-six reached its goal and won its victory on a memorable day in January and set itself apart as a "wonder team," a pioneer team, a team to inspire all middites of the future.

CLASS OF JUNE, 1926

Harry P. Berg

The class of June, 1926, appeared quite satisfied with its government for the preceding year, and at the annual class election held on September 15 overwhelmingly re-elected Harry Berg, president. At the same election La Vergne Wallace was elected vice-president; Percy Dyer, secretary; Paul Harrison, treasurer, and Louis Grimsley, sergeant-at-arms. The June class maintained the highest scholarship of any class. Pins and rings were their insignia, while purple sweaters were the boys' special emblem.

CLASS OF 1927

Although the juniors have no class play, as do the sophomores and seniors, they have captured many honors. The class officers elected on September 26 were: Norris Rebholtz, president; Dorothy Ulrici, secretary-treasurer; Helen Yohner, vice-president, and Olive Wells, sergeant-at-arms.

CLASS OF 1928

The presentation of two oral expression plays this year gave the sophomores an additional chance to shine. Besides producing several dramatic stars, such as Mary Louise Leistner, Bethel Ahrendes, and Clarke Briggs, the class produced several debaters—Louis Bengueral, Frances Fogerty, Janet Ruland, and Ralph Matesky. The class officers were: Ernest Rowe, president; Fred Seeley, vice-president; Jeanette Foster, secretary-treasurer, and Richard Parsons, sergeant-at-arms.

CLASS OF 1929

Three hundred green freshmen invaded Stockton High School on August 31, 1925. As time went on the green was assimilated by the Blue and White, and the freshmen learned all about school traditions and spirit. The freshmen officers were: Jack Hancock, president; Violet Van Pelt, vice-president; Merle De Camp, secretary; Joe Wells, sergeant-at-arms.
