Senior History

FIRST CENTURY

Four centuries ago in a far-off land called Essai chess, dwelt a very powerful and talented race of people who started out in their career as insignificant freshmen and grew into a strong race called seniors. During their generation this group, known as the class of '25, rose to fame and prominence.

Leading them in their first period of life were Donald Brooks Carr and Alberta Horan. In those long-past days these children had a hard struggle in that year 1922. Nevertheless they came on strongly with Merle Harper helping in football and Betty Coffin showing up in dramatic composition.

SECOND CENTURY

On and on they climbed, and their second period was still more successful. They started the year off like a thunder burst, choosing Melvin Belli as chief pasha and Dorothy Carrow as first assistant.

George Barsi gave them glory in the realm of athletics, having been on the state championship basketball team. Don Carr climbed the ladder of fame in dramatics. The oral expression class play, "Come Out of the Kitchen," in which the actress, Ruth Ferguson, shone, proved itself a huge success to be remembered even in this present century.

THIRD CENTURY

As juniors this great band climbed steadily onward with Jack Eccleston as the able captain and Ruth Ferguson to represent the women. During this period they accomplished great things together, carrying through two junior-senior dances.

FOURTH CENTURY

At last this mighty race reached supremacy and ruled as fitted their ability, Robert Goldsberry and Carolyn Kerrick acting as general and adjutant general. Many great events develop during this era. A play, "The Whole Town's Talking," which delighted everyone, a state championship basketball team with such representatives as George Barsi, Bill Mahaffey, and Georgie Cavaglia, and first place in the oratorical league won by Edward Fong, show just a few things that this great race accomplished.

Many years will come and go, more centuries may pass, but the angel of Memory will write in the great Hall of Fame, George Barsi, the 1925 athlete; Betty Coffin, the poetess; Melvin Belli and Clifton Frisbie, the debaters; Edward Fong, the orator; Dorothy Eproson, the musician; Sam Sherman, the scholar; Ernest Lonsdale, the journalist; Don Carr, the actor;—and then dipping her pen again in the clear blue above will write for all to read: "The greatest class of all."
