Post Graduates

THE LORDLY P. G.'s have, since the beginning of the spring semester, invaded the Stockton High School campus in greater numbers than ever before. The P. G. class is better known as Miss Emma Hawkins's Junior College, and under her able guidance much integrity has been shown. That their continuance in school is a privilege which the school need not extend was Miss Hawkins's challenge to her group. Results show that the students are appreciative, for the class average of grades is far above normal.

Composed principally of the 1932 winter class, among the P. G.'s are found such well known achievers of scholastic honors and athletic fame as Nick Demakopoulos, Alice Peterson, Holden Sanford, William Woodward, Ralphyne Brady, Kenneth Evick and Virginia Hoessel. Without Alice Peterson, Nick Demakopoulos, and William Woodward, what would the dramatics department be? Ralphyne Brady is an asset to the Guard and Tackle staff, while we shall never forget that famous orator, Kenneth Evick, for sacrificing a lock of his brilliant red hair to be used as a keepsake under the class plate. Holden Sanford upholds his record in athletics while striving to coach the high school tennis team. Among those P. G.'s who have been with us for a year, the outstanding students are Alethea Tredway and Adamerle McGowan.

Very few of the P. G.'s have dropped out since the first of the semester, and those few only because of disinterestedness. The

P. G. class is grateful to the school, to the teachers who have had patience enough to teach the students, and to Miss Hawkins, whose advice has made them the important part of the school that they are.

Twelve B Class

IN FEBRUARY, 1929, a group of very bewildered, but ambitious individuals entered the sacred portals of Stockton High. During their first year Lawrence Short became an important member of the orchestra, due to his exceptionally fine violin playing. Jean Rossi immediately started the freshmen in athletics by becoming an outstanding tennis player, and Johnny Predagne started his brilliant football career. These freshmen were very dignified from the very start, and, as the year rolled by, they became less and less in awe of the austere upperclassmen.

Then they became sophomores, and promptly began to annoy the new entrants of '30. The music department began a very good year through the aid of the "Sophs." Lester Randolph joined the band, and Lawrence Short was added to the string quarter. Harriet Pulich began her training for the Troubadours, and Douglas Nelson's name was added to the orchestra's roll call.

Then one beautiful morning, the members of the class of '29 were upper classmen. Accordingly, their interest in more intellectual affairs began. Plays, both three- and one-act, were given. Students began the course of public speaking, and entered art contests.

Galen Potter upheld the artistic honor of the class by placing first in a national art contest held by the Scholastic Magazine, and received one hundred dollars as a prize. Douglas Nelson began his dramatic career by appearing in such plays as "Skidding," "Mud," "They'll Do It Every Time," and numerous one-act plays.

Grove Bethards swam the Golden Gate, becoming a hero to all female members of the "lower classes." Bill Daoust joined the ranks of travelers through participating in the American Legion Junior League play-offs held in Chicago. Walt Huber astounded the rest of the junior class by becoming "Ding Dong," of yell leader fame, and by entering the ranks of the Troubadours. Nearly all activities were entered by a member of the 12B class. The Guard and Tackle weekly staff grew bigger as Jack McFarland, Grover Bethards, Douglas Nelson, Jeanne Hammell, and Dorothy Walker, among others, began their search of "news." Attelra Hanford and Jack McFarland edited "Buds o' Blue," and Galen Potter began art work for the annual; Jeannette Stamer was chosen to represent Stockton High in the Shakespearean contest, and appeared in "The Goose Hangs High;" Dorothea Woods was elected secretary of the Girls' League, and was chosen to dedicate the airplane, Port Stockton. At June, with their last year's work only half done, they are still resolved to be in their estimation, the best class ever.
