

GRADUATES

FEBRUARY CLASS

IN FEBRUARY, 1933, 273 so-called 'Scrubs', 146 of whom were boys and 127 girls, found their way with weak knees and blank, expressionless faces to Stockton's one-and-only high school, ready to begin their drudgery of obtaining higher education. They were as green as any entering freshmen, but evidently ripened, as most of us do, with age; for during the course of four years they brought forth from their midst many scholars, athletes, and leaders who left their shining marks on the school.

In their second and third years they were no exceptional class, with no outstanding personages; but when they became high and mighty seniors ready to graduate, several of their number left fine records in the history of Stockton High School, some in sports, some in leadership, and others in scholarship. Bette Barth, Virginia Wirth and Kenneth Wong received scholarship seals on their diplomas, entitling them to life membership in the California Scholarship Federation. These we will remember for their outstanding scholarship ability. There were also eleven who entered the ranks of the February graduating class of 1937 by finishing their four year high school course in three and a half years, and we are not to forget the scholastic ability of some of these. Many students also received on their diplomas the gold merit seals which are a means of showing that the student who wins one had been a good citizen in high school, that he had done extra duty outside of class, and that he had obtained an average merit record of over 110 merits.

The athletes who left in this class will not be forgotten for their part in the sport life of Stockton High. Among them we have those ever famous football heroes—Joe Rishwain, Bill Abdallah, Ray Bradfield, Ed Gagle, Edwin Miller, and Fred Nessler. This senior class claims one tennis player, Jack Dixon, who played for four years, and one member of the swimming team, Fred Van Dyke. The basketball team felt the loss of three players: Harry Clements, Irving Penberthy, and Ray Bradfield. Bob Wheeler, a sprinter on the track team, and Lewis Ford, known for his many records in pole vaulting, were also missed after the February class graduated.

In the 12B term the class was under the able guidance of Jimmie Lyons, president; Manuel Belitsky, vice-president; and Lila Jean Redman, secretary. From this class came the capable editor, N. J. McNair, and the equally capable business manager, Marcel Murdock, both on the staff of the Guard and Tackle. When the class was in the mightiest of mighty positions, that of 12A's, they chose Leslie Knoles as president; Tom French, vice-president; and Priscilla Hatch, secretary, to pilot them during their final stretch. A few who made themselves known as capable student leaders entered student government. Monroe Langdon, after having many other important duties, was elected president of the student body in the fall semester of '36. Bette Barth, who had the highest scholastic standing in the class, worked with Monroe as first vice-president. She was also president of the Girls' League.

This class was fairly represented in the music department, so their loss was felt there also. Leslie Knoles, Ed Yelland, and Monroe Langdon were in the Troubadours, contributing their best. Jimmie Lyons was our very efficient drum major and made some showing at the football games. Norman Profit pounded his way to fame on the piano.

Some of these worthy graduates were also known for their dramatic abilities. Remember Leslie Knoles in the Playcrafters' play, "Three Cornered Moon"? We remember other worthy seniors in dramatics. Howard Thurston and Priscilla Hatch had outstanding parts in the senior play, "The Newspaper Bride".

At last the class was ready for graduation. The theme of the Class Day program was "The Bridge", and on the night of Commencement 162 students marched solemnly across the stage in the Civic Auditorium to receive their diplomas. The two girls with the highest scholarship records, Bette Barth, and Virginia Wirth, were the commencement speakers.

FEBRUARY CLASS PLAY

"THE NEWSPAPER BRIDE" under the direction of David Ritchie, was chosen for the Senior Play of the February Class. Those taking part in the play were Janet McGinnis, Monroe Langdon, Gail Scheere, Maude Alyce Metcalf, Priscilla Hatch, Howard Thurston, and Lewis Ford.

Vandelyn Harper, portrayed by Janet McGinnis, was an artist's model whose picture taken as a bride for a newspaper advertisement caused the ensuing action of the play.

A publicity stunt for advertising the play took place when Janet, attired as the Newspaper Bride, and her husband, Howard Thurston, rushed out of the main building under a shower of rice into a waiting car decorated with large signs showing the bride and advertising the play, and accompanied by loud horns of following automobiles was driven about the downtown section.

The High School Orchestra, playing several selections in keeping with the mode of the play, was directed by Virginia L. Short.
