FOREWORD

You have lived each day well, making each day passed a happy dream. To recall these faded moments and refresh your minds has been the chief object in publishing this annual. We have tried in every way possible to show you these incidents of the past in the informal way in which they happened. This is your book.

We DEDICATE

the Blue and White to L. Lucille Turner because of her interest in and love for our school. . . .

We wish to thank those who by their purchases, cooperation, and loyal support have made possible Vol. I, No. 1 of this new annual published for all the students of Stockton High School. So thoroughly did the spirit of Tarzan enter into this pioneer effort that he, — symbol of our beloved school, became the theme of this book. . . .

ADMINISTRATION

I am glad to welcome this first issue of the Blue and White, a worthy successor of the Guard and Tackle Annual and Senior Memories. Not only does this book bear a new name, but we expect it to be the first of a whole series of successful publications. Today you are interested in it because it portrays the activities of you and your friends. In the years to come it will have increasing value for you in recalling pleasant memories of your high school days. I am sure that this will be one of your most treasured mementos of your life in Stockton High School.

On Tuesday afternoons one could step into the student council room and find the student body-elected officers discussing school problems which were for the good of the school,—we hope. New and interesting items were brought before this group for decisions that would last for the years to come. In general this student council, typical of similar august bodies, always decided something every time it met which, by the way, is what it is supposed to do,—or is it?

This group will long be remembered for its fairness to each and every student in the student body. These boys and girls were advised by L. N. Pease, who has an experienced way of understanding student councils.

STUDENT CONTROL

FOR THE SECOND TIME in the current school year, a group of boys and girls have disbanded with a sigh of relief. The sigh was caused by the title "Member of the Student Control" which each boy and girl carried. Not that they didn't enjoy being on the controls, but it did get a little tiresome turning in your friends or being on the constant watch for school rule breakers.

The student controls have always been a pain in the sides of many students who like to smoke, cause disturbances, cut, etc., and this year they were a little bit more so than ever before. Demerits were recommended by the controls and with the always assured cooperation of the deans, the culprits usually found a little slip coming their way at one time or another.

Contrary to belief, the controls were not hard hearted. Minor infractions, first offenses, and erring freshmen were all treated leniently with the hope of future good behavior. Sometimes the hope was fulfilled: other times the student came back, and this time he or she received some nice little demerits.

The members of the controls have more to do than the aforementioned. They have, for instance, the dubious pleasure of getting into games free in order to keep the student spectators orderly. Many times they were tangled up in a fight which was not for the dear old alma mater.
