OFFICERS

First row: IIB, V. P. June Bybee, Sec. Mardel Housh, Pres. Bernard Etcheverry. Second row: IIA, Sec. Ruth Schmidt, Pres. Allan Kohler, V. P. George Kapel.

First row: Sec. Louvan Kohler (IIA), Sec. Jean Gardner (IIB), V. P. Edith White (IIB). Second row: Pres. Kent Elsworth (IIA), V. P. Forrest Goodman (IIA), Pres. Charles Gardipee (IIB).

WATCH IT, freshie, we're nearly seniors, and would love to trample on you!" So has run the feelings of the juniors of the past year. These boys and girls, who are so eager to become seniors that they hardly know which end they are standing on, have—if they're lucky—now become the "high and mighty" seniors, exalted rulers of highschooldom. By attaining this high rank, the fondest dreams of every beginning freshman has been realized. Some of these freshman have attained their goal, others have failed.

As seems to have been the custom of past years, the freshmen have advanced to sophomores and from sophomores to juniors. These juniors have set up a record of which they should be, and are, justly proud. They have produced some brilliant students, some outstanding athletes, and above all, a group of youths who will be well fitted to be the citizens and voters of tomorrow.

When these juniors enter school again next September, as seniors, they will be able to look back and say, "Our junior class was one of the best ever to be in the Stockton High School." These words will have a ring of pride in them, and well they might, for when these same students entered the awesome sanctuary of knowledge, the high school, they were timid and afraid to speak or act for fear they would say or do the wrong thing. They were told they had to buy their "elevator tickets" in order to use the "elevators", which seemed to have an awful habit of not being where they were said to be. After a short time, they outgrew their gullibleness and wouldn't believe anything they were told. For this they were called "dumb scrubs". They had nearly discarded this attitude when they became sophomores. As sophomores, they looked down upon the poor freshmen and up to the juniors. They hardly noticed the seniors for they were too far above them. Continuing along as sophomores, they became more and more learned in the ways of being educated. Tales of terror were told to the freshies while they themselves wondered what was in store for them next year. By keeping their heads up, they managed to survive and at last—became juniors. Eureka! They were upperclassmen! The world was theirs. Only a "few" seniors were left above them. After two years of hard work, the impossible had happened.

Now, as juniors of the past, they look back with mingled emotions upon their junior year, a year of comfort and ease, free from upperclassmen who could bother them, although they, as upperclassmen, could and did bother the poor underclassmen. Looking forward as they do, these seniors-to-be will no doubt be a class that will live long in the minds of the teachers, their parents, their friends, and themselves. The world is just opening its arms to them as seniors. They have in the past shown so many admirable qualities that their future as seniors is practically assured as one of happiness and success. If they follow in the footsteps of the many senior classes that have graduated from Stockton High, the school of learning, into the World, the school of experience, and do as well as their predecessors have done, they have a bright future ahead of them. Juniors of the past; seniors of the future, we salute you! From the Stockton High School as a whole, congratulations on the past and good luck in the future!

SOPHOMORES

ONE SIDE PLEASE; here comes the Sophs!" Thus, the browbeaten despised Freshmen at last assume their position among the upper classmen.

From our entering day we had looked with great longing upon the wonderful dignity and perfection of the able seniors and now we have taken one big step towards that goal. We are sophomores.

We no longer had to inquire hesitatingly from some more advanced students which way we were to go to reach our various class rooms or other activities; now we were the ones who pointed the way with great pride and condescension to any and all who were bewildered or looking for aid. Neither did we any longer feel obligated to answer when we heard that obnoxious "Hey Scrub" that we so often knew in our freshmen days, but with what great joy did we extend that same greeting to all entering classes.

We feel that in this short time we have changed in many ways. We have learned many things both from our books and from our experiences, and we trust we are wise enough to profit by the wisdom gained.

Certainly, we are well started on our road to dignity and fame of upperclassmen.

The following quoted poem well expresses our willingness to do and our determinations to succeed:

When all the rest are weary
And leave their work undone,
The sophomores will hum along
And do it "just for fun,"
If ever there's a mission
That no one else will do.
Just serve it to us nice and hot
And watch us wade right through
When later we look back again
To those days of the past,
We'll always see our dear old class
Just as we saw it last.
Ye future classes that will gaze
Upon these lines and sigh,
Keep this among your treasures,
Just say, "I will," and try.

BEVERLY BILLINGS

FRESHMEN

DO YOU seniors remember when you first came upon the premises of good old Stockton Hi? Can you remember that first day when you appeared on the campus with starched shirts and pretty dresses? Of course you remember. How could you forget those names that were immediately pounced upon your ears such as "scrub", "freshie", and "child"? You probably wondered just how they knew you were new in this institution. Your clean clothes, shined shoes, and combed hair was a dead give away as to your greenness. The elevator "gag" soon wore off though—didn't it?—when you learned that no elevator was to be found.

Anyway the day went on and so did you. New friends to make, new teachers to know, and new rooms to find. Didn't your heart just about break when one of your favorite teachers spoke harshly to you when you didn't believe that she should have done so? Oh, well, that is school life as you probably found out later.

You most likely felt out of place when the dances, assemblies, and other school doings came about, but nevertheless you managed to let your feelings leave you and you entered into the fun with the rest of the students. The continuous thought of next year was always in your mind. But how often did you wonder if next year was ever going to come around so you could do the same to the incoming freshmen. Of course you wouldn't be so mean to them as the upperclassmen of this year were to you and of course you weren't as mean to them either—were you?

And now you are at last one step above the low freshmen. But wait until you see what is in front of you now for you are still a lower classman. Your freshman year has passed but that is not all—another year is coming up.
