Knowledge is essential to the sailor and student. The seaman's life depends on his ability to tie knots; the student, learning.

SENIOR OFFICERS—FEBRUARY

GEORGE KAPEL, Pres.

FRED HOLDEN, Vice-Pres.

DON LA MOINE, Sec.

For February graduates, their last year on the merry old tub has been exciting and inspiring. After all, they spent three long years before attaining the position of first-class sailors, and they intend to enjoy themselves when they become high and mighty. When they signed up as apprentices so long ago they were a motley crew, coming from a variety of places; for example, one came directly from Japan. But their four years together have molded them into a solid group, loyal and ready to cooperate with each other.

As the largest, strongest, and most experienced members of the crew, they have taken outstanding parts in the many activities during the last year at sea. They've waited for this opportunity, and they've utilized it to the full. There was hardly an activity on the ship during the past year that did not draw on the intelligence and talents of the first-class seamen.

However, it has not been all play and no work. It seems that the older one gets the more is expected of him, and the work certainly piles up during the last crowded year. It makes the tasks assigned during the other years seem like kindergarten work. The group had outstanding workers, like Tamotsu Shibutani, Ray Hammet, Elsie Bussemer, Herb Bowman, Harmon Schmidt, and many more, and then also lots of those conscientious workers doing their best and constantly striving for improvement.

Some of the fourth-year sailors will board another vessel for another four-year cruise after the summer is over; others will launch out into the seas of life, but none of them forget the happy days of the trips taken during their experience on the good ship, Stockton High. It is true that the old boat needs patching up, and perhaps it is rather crowded. All of that will be improved in time, and the sailors merely had to make the best of a difficult situation, thus learning to be patient and cheerful under trying circumstances. In the near future they will be among the citizens who decide matters of policy, and they will be ready to take an intelligent interest in their Alma Mater.
