"To maintain standards of conduct among students" is the purpose of the student controls. There is a control for both the girls and boys, headed by the First Vice-President of the student body and the Commissioner of Welfare. Each group has twenty members made up of the commercial, academic, and vocational students. The members are to perform hall duty and rally duty and are to turn in the name of anyone found cutting, smoking, riding a bicycle on the school grounds, or otherwise infringing on the rules. The girls have their meetings every Wednesday afternoon; the boys hold theirs whenever they are called together by the Commissioner of Welfare. At the meetings any student brought up has a chance to give his side of the question and is entitled to a fair trial by the members. The student controls are not formed primarily to punish the students but to warn them and help them obey school rules. They aim to treat all offenders firmly but fairly.

The Student Council, acting as the "Congress" of the school, consists of eleven active members who are chosen by the student body during the semi-annual elections. Mr. Cave, school vice-principal and dean of boys, sponsors the group, while Mr. Carmichael is financial adviser.

This last year has been a busy and eventful one for the Student Council. Student dances every other week were instituted in the fall and met with increased success throughout the winter and spring. Two other important innovations were the amendment to the constitution making the editor of the Blue and White a member of the Student Council and the voting of the printing of a small booklet to take the place of the biographies in the annual. Approving bills, passing athletic awards, and planning a Spring Carnival were the other activities of the "Congress". In January and again in June the semi-annual Student Council banquet is held. At these the governing body of Stockton High lets off a little of its pent up steam. Although there is no reward for their labor except honor and a very few merits, the students pitch in to work for the school.
