This year, with our thoughts so continuously centered on the defense of the Western Hemisphere, we hope that we have been able to preserve for you something equally great in this written and photographic revue of the events of 1941 at San Juan.

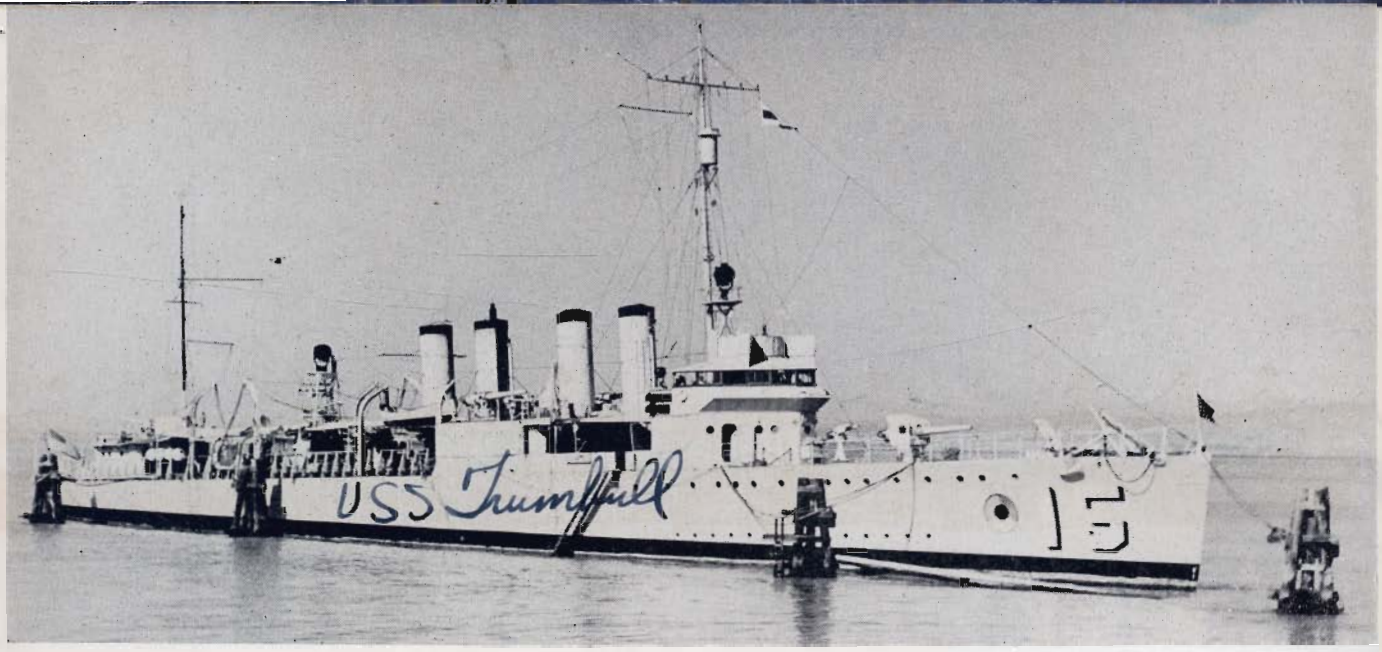
SHIPS

Have you ever stood on the bow of a ship on a moonlit night when the water was calm? If so, were you not impressed with the gracefulness of the ship as its bow plowed through the water? Everything was serene except for an occasional sound of the ship's bell. The moon beams glistened on the ripples, the bow evenly divided the water, and the ship's beauty and cleanliness were portrayed as though it were passing in review. All was quiet and peaceful.

Were you not impressed? Did it not make you think of the beauties of life? Did it not make you wish to develop within yourself the qualities of grace, peace, and beauty?

If you are to make your "port", you may well take a few lessons from the sea. It is a hard life. It requires courage and strength. It requires keenness of mind and determination to achieve. Your ups and downs will be like a ship buffeted by the waves. Keep yourself lashed to the wheel, your eye on the compass, your heart set, and your mind and body alert, and you will emerge victorious, or, as the poet expressed it, "every port he sought was won".



TRIBUTE

With the navy playing such a vital role in the present defense program, San Juan proudly points to graduates and students, who are engaged in this important work.

As a tribute to those San Juan men who are doing their bit for Uncle Sam's Navy, we offer a salute to:
