

"PORT OF STOCKTON HIGHLIGHTS"—Continued

(11) The ocean terminal industrial area includes:

COTTON COMPRESS, compressing thousands of bales of California cotton annually for export.

GRAIN TERMINAL, prepares over 50,000 tons of California barley annually for export.

BEAN CLEANER, cleaning and grading California beans for world markets.

TWO LUMBER TERMINALS, distributing shiploads of lumber for central valley construction.

MOLASSES TANKS, imports molasses to feed California livestock.

CEMENT SILOS, distributing shiploads of cement.

OIL TERMINAL, located adjacent to the Port of Stockton, on Rough and Ready Island, having storage tanks for distributing petroleum and petroleum products to central California.

There are 24 miles of potential waterfront property on both sides of the channel awaiting development.

There are 10,000 acres of reasonably priced waterfront industrial sites which are served by railroad and truck highways.

The port facilities are served by a belt line railroad, operated jointly by the Western Pacific, Santa Fe and Southern Pacific Companies.

Terminal rates are maintained at Stockton by steamship lines operating in the Coastwise, Intercoastal and Foreign trade routes. Freight rates are the same as from other Pacific Coast ports of call.

Leading volume commodities, from the central valleys of California, of which Stockton is the ocean gateway, as well as commodities consumed in this vast inland empire are: Apricots, Asparagus, Barley, Beans, Cement, Gasoline, Lumber, Molasses, Milk Products, Olives, Peaches, Pears, Raisins, Spinach, Sugar, Tomatoes, Wine, Wool, and hundreds of processed and manufactured items.
