To Keep Ahead of Needs

Not only to keep abreast, but also ahead of the needs of the area served by the Stockton Record, this newspaper has, during the past five years, built three new buildings, completely remodeled the existing buildings and installed the finest equipment available in the mechanical departments.

This expansion has just been completed with the installation of a new seven-unit Goss "Headliner" Press. The "Headliner" doubled the capacity of the former press as well as giving the Record facilities to print three colors and black.

For more than 62 years, the Stockton Record, the "Hometown Newspaper" of the Stockton Trading Area, has carefully cultivated this great market and the readers have made the Record a daily reading habit to give advertisers fast action and sure sales. This reader interest and loyalty, without parallel in Central California, cannot be bought or grown overnight but it is yours when you advertise in the Stockton Record.

More than 55,000 families read the Stockton Record every day.
