Mustang Basketball

Only three lettermen greeted Coach Frank Boyle for the 1952-1953 season. They were Don Buchman, John Reinking, and "record setter" Nick Romanoff. Nevertheless, the Mustang hardwood five proved to be a fairly integrated machine.

The hoopsters didn't prove to be the scourge of the B-7 league this year, but they were successful in grabbing their share of wins. The top run for league title changed hands many times and the 'Tangs had their hoofs right in the middle of the scramble for it.

Coach Boyle, in his initial year as SC Mustang quintet coach, pulled some major upsets in the league, but the 'Tangs couldn't get enough wins on successive weekends to push them through the season in order to place them in the upper brackets.

San Mateo, CCSF, West Contra Costa, and Santa Rosa were each, at one time or another, in first place and all had, at least once, been beaten by the local five.

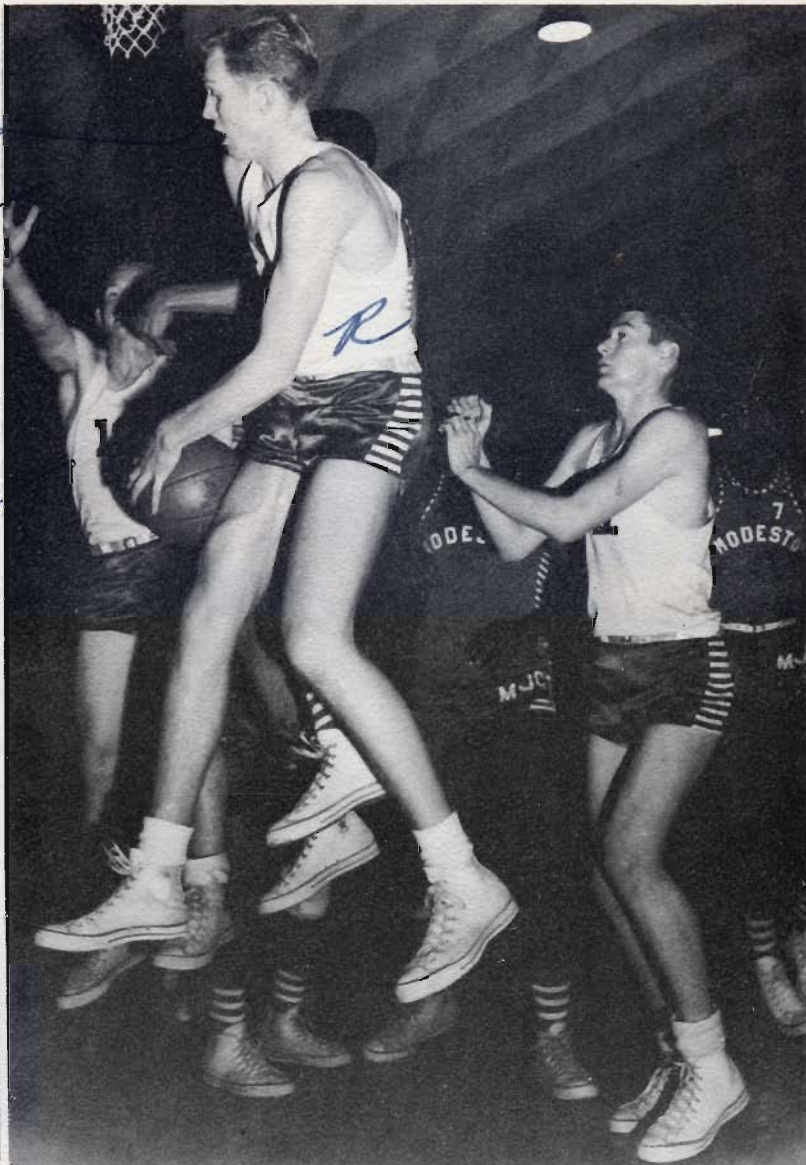

Chair:

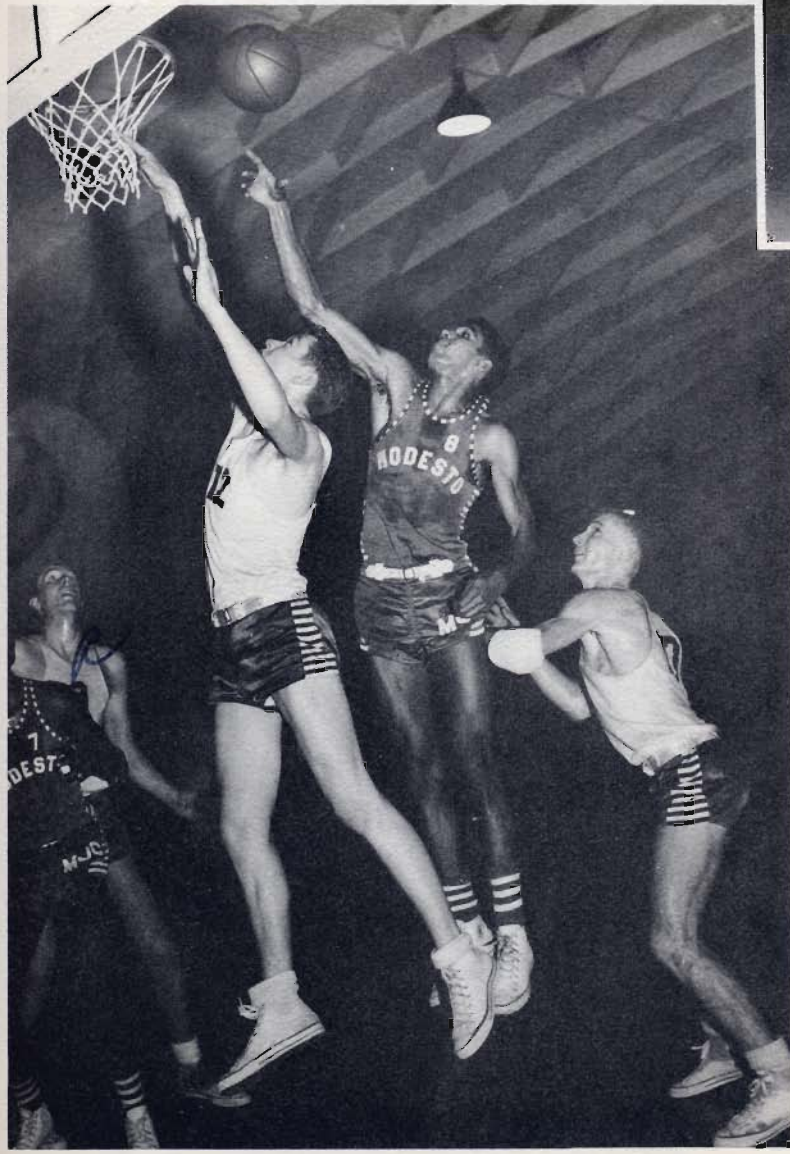

You're a good looking gal and I have always admired you. If you weren't tied down I would have asked you out; But I'm sure he's a great guy. I don't think I know him. Good luck in all you do. Remember me as '67".

Colt Basketball

Mr. Michael Garrigan
coach

Coach Mike Garrigan left no stones unturned this season to field one of the finest Colt cage teams in SC's history. The Colt mentor welcomed only one first stringer, Paul Erickson, from last year's hardwood quintet, but using a combination of high school transfers, JV men, and last year's Bee team players, Coach Garrigan came up with a smooth functioning quintet.

The Colts began their cage victories against non-league competition. Oakdale was the first game for SC, followed by successive wins over St. Mary's, Oakdale again, Jackson, Oroville, Shasta, and again with St. Mary's. McClatchy, Grant and Turlock fell before the Colts in the league openers.

Modesto proved to be the only dark spot on the Colt record, as the Colts were tripped up in Modesto. Then the Colts broke Lodi's spell over SC cage teams by downing them easily in the first game and again in a return contest at the end of the season.

Sacramento, Woodland, Turlock, and Modesto were knocked off in that order to cinch the Sac-Joaquin league title for the SC squad with nine wins against one loss.

Sterling performances were turned in throughout the season by such men as Carl Isaacs, high-scoring Clint Waring, Dwight Doerr, diminutive Jack Cheney, consistent Paul Erickson, and George Moton. When in need of reserve power, Coach Garrigan found dependable and able relief in Junior Reynosa, Phil Sanguinetti, Robert Ivery, Bob Hargis, and Connie Chambers.

In the Acker Tournament, the SC scoring machine slackened under the tournament pressure and they found themselves holding the number four spot in the final standings.

Colt Bees

Coach Peregoy's team, though small in stature, had a better than average season. The Bees played their games with just as much zeal and fervor as their Colt varsity stablemates.

The "B" quintet pulled through the season with an overall eight win, seven loss record and four wins and six losses in league play. Toward the end of the season, Coach Peregoy's hoopsters had trouble getting into the win column. Wins over McClatchy, Modesto, Sacramento, and their traditional rivals, the Flamelets, highlighted the SC lightweight season.
