Stockton College Adult Education program had another first in occupational training. On January 29, 1955 the first group of vocational nurses were graduated, having been trained completely in the local school system.

The vocational nurses' primary duties are bedside nursing and care of the chronically ill. Their training is aimed to fit local demands. The instruction in school is supplemented by work carried on at San Joaquin General Hospital and Saint Joseph's Hospital under the guidance of clinical instructors provided by Mrs. Barbara White, supervisor of the program.
